

Briefings on Six Dalmatian Coast Countries and Turkey

Scott Pearson
Professor Emeritus
Stanford University

This essay contains briefings on six European countries that border on the Dalmatian Coast – Albania, Croatia, Greece, Italy, Montenegro, and Slovenia – and Turkey. Italy was a founding member of the European Union (EU) in 1957, Greece (1981), Slovenia (2004), and Croatia (2013) acceded to the EU later, and Albania, Montenegro, and Turkey have applied for EU membership. Each briefing focuses on political and economic history and on quality-of-life indicators. I wrote the briefings for the Chief Executives Organization’s program, Dalmatian Coast, An Adriatic Sea Adventure, July 28-August 7, 2018.

The historical section of each briefing begins with early settlement and then identifies key turning points in the country’s history during the past two millennia. The indicators of recent socio-economic development are levels and growth rates of income per capita, levels of adult literacy and life expectancy at birth, and rankings in the United Nations’ Human Development Index, the World Bank’s Ease of Doing Business Index, and Transparency International’s Corruption Perceptions Index. A time line, a bibliography, and a description of sites that I visited on the Dalmatian and Ionian Coasts are appended.

A Briefing on Albania

Albania's History and Politics. Skanderbeg (ruled 1444-1468) became Albania's national hero by defeating the Ottoman Turks in 14 campaigns.

But Albania was part of the Ottoman Empire from 1468 to 1912.

The country gained its independence after the First Balkan War against the Ottoman Turks in 1912.

King Zog I (1920-1939 – Ahmed Zogu until 1928) is now vilified because he aligned with Fascist Italy and ruled repressively before Italy absorbed Albania in 1939. Enver Hoxha (1944-1985) was an autarkic Stalinist who is now seen as a villain because he ruled brutally while breaking ties with Yugoslavia (1948), the Soviet Union (1961), and China (1978).

The last Communist leader, Ramiz Alia (1985-1992), introduced free-market reforms in 1990. Sali Berisha won the first free election in 1992 and served as Prime Minister twice – 1992-1997 and 2005-2013. In 1997, naïve investors put funds worth half of national income into pyramid schemes run by Albanian banks. Their collapse nearly caused anarchy. Edi Rama, the leader of the Socialist Party, has been Prime Minister since 2013.

Albania joined NATO in 2009, began negotiations for EU accession in 2014, and opened EU accession talks in March 2020.

Contemporary Albania

Albania is one of the poorest countries in Europe, with a per capita income of only $14,496 (2019) – just 31 percent of the EU average and 89th of the 186 countries ranked by the World Bank.

More than 800,000 Albanians work abroad and remit $1.5 billion annually (2018). Liberal policies attracted $1.2 billion of private foreign investment (2019). The country also receives foreign aid ($0.3 billion in 2018). Albania exports apparel, textiles, footwear, and metals, mostly to EU countries ($4.8 billion in 2019).

Albania benefits from high literacy (98 percent), long life expectancy (78 years), and low poverty (14 percent). Seventy percent of Albanians use the Internet. In 2019, Albania ranked 69th of 189 countries in the UN's Human Development Index and 82nd of 190 countries in the World Bank's Ease of Doing Business index. However, Albania ranked a woeful 106th of 198 countries in Transparency International's Corruption Perceptions Index.

After World War I, Croatia joined Yugoslavia (1918-1991).

Yugoslavia disintegrated in 1991 into five separate states – Bosnia-

Herzegovina, Croatia, Macedonia, Slovenia, and remnant Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro). After Slovenia, Croatia was the second richest and industrial region of Yugoslavia (1918-1991).

Since 1991, two parties, the Croatian Democratic Union (HDZ) on the right and the Social Democratic Party (SPD) on the left, have dominated politics. Franjo Tudjman (HDZ), the first President (1991-1999), attained independence and preserved territorial integrity. But his program to privatize state assets was a corrupt give-away to cronies.

Ivica Racan (SDP, 2000-2003) paved the way for increased investment and growing tourism. Ivo Sanader (HDZ, 2003-2009) opened negotiations for Croatia's accession to the European Union (EU) in 2005 and led Croatia into NATO in 2009. Zoran Milanovic (SDP, 2011-2016) led Croatia's accession to the EU in 2013. Andrej Plenkovic (HDZ, 2016-present), an attorney, a former diplomat, and a pragmatic centrist, has overseen substantial economic progress, which allowed Croatia's adoption of the Euro in 2023.

Croatia and Southeastern Europe, Since 1991

Independent Croatia made the economic transition from socialist self-management to competitive market capitalism. Between 1995 and 2008, the Croatian GDP per capita (PPP in constant 2017 dollars) grew annually at 4.5 percent. But after the global recession of 2008, the economy shrunk by 10 percent (2008-2013) and then recovered to grow at 3.8 percent annually (2013-2021). Croatia's price-adjusted per capita income in 2021 was $31,908 – 72 percent of the EU average and 49 percent of the US level. Croatia exports an array of electrical equipment and pharmaceuticals, mostly to EU partners ($35.3 billion in 2021).

Proportional Representation of Croatia's Export Earnings in 2017

In 2021, Croatia had a 99 percent literacy rate and a life expectancy of 76 years. Good performance in health and education improved Croatia's ranking in the UNDP's Human Development Index (40th of 191 countries in 2021) relative to that in the World Bank's listing of per capita incomes (48th of 187 countries in 2021). Eighty-one percent of Croatians used the Internet in 2021.

The economy is constrained by slow privatization, low tax transparency, a large foreign debt, and high unemployment (7.6 percent in 2021).

A Briefing on Greece

Greece's History and Politics. The first Ancient Greek dynasty was Mycenaean Greece (1600-1200 BCE), which conquered Minoan Crete (1450 BCE). Greece experienced a Dark Age (1100-750 BCE) of instability, contracting agriculture, and depopulation. In the Archaic Age (750-500 BCE), Greeks created city-states – Athens, Corinth, Sparta, Thebes, Ephesus (Anatolia), and Syracuse (Sicily). Classical Greece (500-338 BCE) featured intellectual creativity and Sparta's defeat of Athens (404 BCE).

Classical Greece During the Greco-Persian Wars (500-479 BCE)

For two millennia, Greece was ruled by outsiders – Macedonians (338-146 BCE), Romans (146 BCE-330 CE), Byzantines (330-1453), and Ottoman Turks (1453-1830). After the Balkan Wars (1912-1913), Greece gained territory from the Ottomans and expanded nearly to its current size. Greece reached its current borders in 1947, when Italy ceded the Dodecanese Islands (including Rhodes) to Greece.

Contemporary Greece

Greece's GDP per capita (PPP in constant 2017 dollars) grew annually at 3.2 percent between 1993 and 2007. But Greece suffered a debt and liquidity crisis, and its economy contracted by 26 percent (2007-2013). After the country received EU and IMF bailouts of $340 billion, it eventually resumed growth, averaging 1.3 percent per year between 2013 and 2019. Greece's price-adjusted per capita income in 2019 was $30,722 – 66 percent of the average level in the European Union and 46th of 186 countries in the World Bank's ranking of per capita incomes (2019).

A Briefing on Italy

Italy's History and Politics. In the 3rd century BCE, Rome gained control of the Italian peninsula by forming alliances with small Italian kingdoms. The Romans defeated Hannibal of Carthage in 201 BCE and took Sicily and Sardinia. Rome then expanded to control the entire Mediterranean region. The Roman Empire divided in half in the late 4th century, and the western part fell in 476 to Germanic invaders from northern Europe – Vandals, Anglo-Saxons, Visigoths, Franks, and Ostrogoths.

The Roman Empire At Its Peak – Under Emperor Trajan, 117 CE

In the mid-6th century, Byzantine (Eastern Roman) Emperor Justinian reunited much of the Roman Empire (including Italy). The Venetian Republic (697-1797) controlled northeastern Italy and established a sea-based empire of islands leading to Constantinople.

In the 7th-13th centuries, northern Italy was part of the German-ruled Holy Roman Empire while southern Italy (including Sicily and Sardinia) was conquered and governed by Byzantines, Muslim Arabs, Normans, Germans, French, and Spanish. During the Renaissance (13th-17th centuries), Florence and Genoa joined Venice as innovative northern Italian city-states, central Italy was controlled by the Vatican, and southern Italy was ruled by Spain.

Napoleon Bonaparte's France ruled most of Italy from 1796 until 1814. Under the leadership of Sardinia, Italy was unified between 1815 and 1861.

The per capita income in Italy in 2007 was 3.5 times higher than it was in 1960. But Italy's per capita GDP in 2014 (measured by the World Bank in constant 2017 dollars) suffered a decline of 12 percent from the 2007 peak. Growth of per capita income then resumed at an annual rate of 1.2 percent between 2014 and 2019. But in 2019 per capita income was still 7 percent lower than the peak reached in 2007.

Italy benefits from good infrastructure, a well-educated workforce, and quite high Internet use (74 percent). Italy's economy relies on exports ($632.5 billion in 2019) – of machinery (including computers), vehicles, electrical machinery, and pharmaceuticals. Other sources of Italian income generation are tourism (61.6 million tourists spent $51.6 billion in 2018) and emigrant remittances ($10.5 billion in 2018). ### Contemporary Montenegro

Independent Montenegro has struggled to make the economic transition from socialist self-management to market capitalism.

Between 1999 and 2019, Montenegro's per capita GDP (measured by the World Bank in PPP in constant 2017 dollars) grew at an annual rate of 3 percent. That modest economic progress brought per capita income to $23,189 in 2019, half of the EU average and 59th of the 186 countries ranked by the World Bank (2019).

By 2019, the country had increased literacy to 99 percent and life expectancy to 77 years. But nearly one-quarter of Montenegrins earned incomes beneath the national line of poverty. Montenegro ranked 48th of 189 countries in the UN's Human Development Index (2019). Seventy-three percent of Montenegrins used the Internet, and the country ranked 50th of 190 countries in the World Bank's Ease of Doing Business index (2019). However, Montenegro ranked only 66th of 198 countries in Transparency International's Corruption Perceptions Index (2019). For Montenegro to qualify for future accession, EU officials have requested that the country reduce corruption, control crime, increase economic reforms, and improve competitiveness.

The Hittite Kingdom (Hatti) At Its Greatest Territorial Extent, c. 1295 BCE

From the 11th through the 6th centuries BCE, Greek communities founded city-states on the Aegean and Black Sea coasts. Gold-rich western Anatolia was ruled by the Phrygian (9th-7th centuries BCE) and Lydian (7th-6th centuries BCE) Kingdoms.

The Achaemenid Persian Empire ruled Anatolia for two centuries (547-333 BCE), but lost it to Alexander the Great of Macedonia.

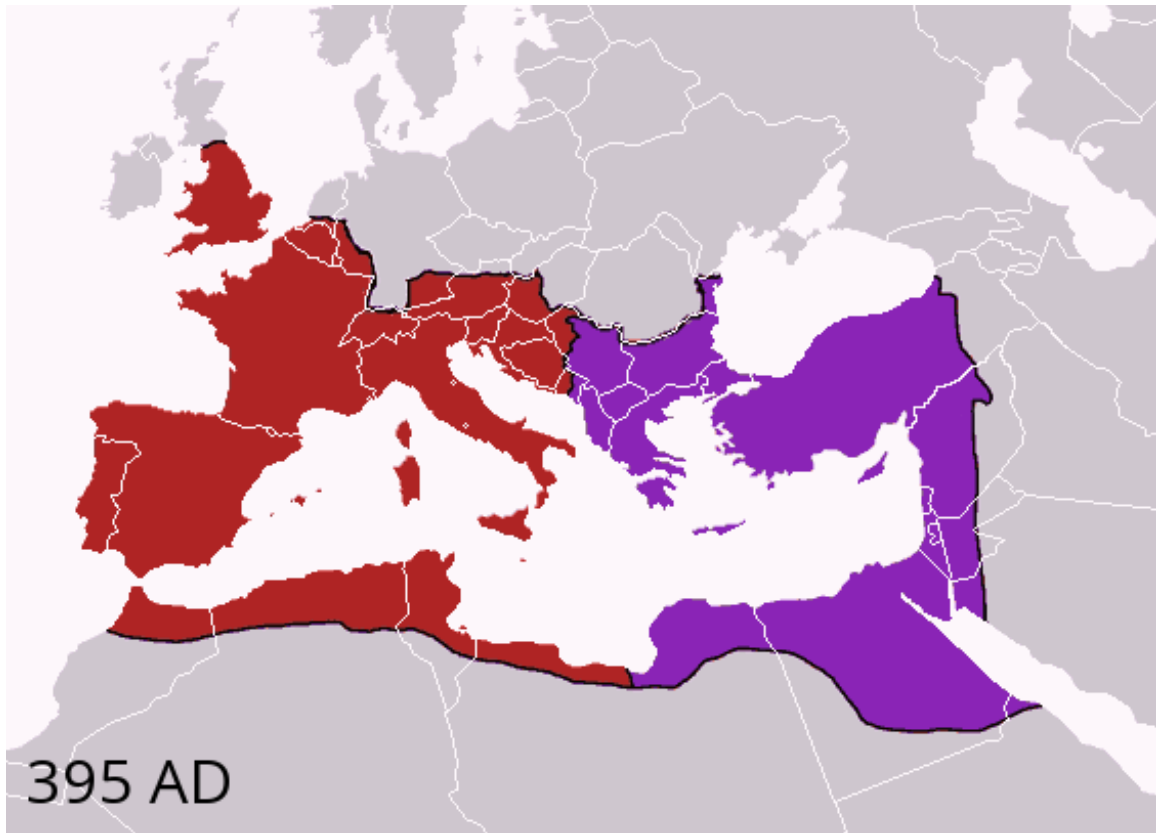

Two Hellenistic Kingdoms (Seleucid and Ptolemaic, 333-130 BCE) followed Alexander in controlling Anatolia.

Turkey was neutral in World War II and joined NATO in 1952. Democratic governments have led the country since 1950, with the exception of three periods of military rule (1960-1961, 1971-1973, and 1980-1983). Turkey signed a customs union with the European Union in 1996 and began negotiations for accession to full EU membership in 2005.

The Justice and Development Party (AKP) won national elections in 2002, 2007, 2011, 2015, and 2018. Recep Tayyip Erdogan served as Prime Minister (2003-2014) and has been President since 2014. Erdogan was re-elected as President in 2018.

Sites Visited on the Dalmatian and Ionian Coasts

Dalmatian Coast: An Adriatic Sea Adventure

Chief Executives Organization (CEO)

July 28-August 7, 2018

Ship-based aboard the *Le Lyrial

Venice, Italy

Venice has a modest population – 55,000 in the historic center and 270,000 in all of the city – but a remarkable past. Located at the northern end of the Adriatic Sea, Venice created a republic (697-1797) and a trading empire along the Dalmatian Coast and into the Eastern Mediterranean. Venice served as an entrepôt, connecting Europe with the Orient and became Europe's richest city in the 15th century through commerce, banking, shipbuilding, and artisanship. Eventually, the Republic of Venice was overtaken by Ottoman expansion, Portuguese exploration, and Napoleonic conquest. Since its conquest by Napoleon in 1797, Venice has thrived on tourism. Its historic island-based buildings and 28 miles of canals attracted 22 million tourists in 2016. In 1987 Venice and its lagoon were designated a UNESCO World Heritage site.

The CEO group began its exploration of Venice with a gondola ride and benefited from a well-informed guide during a walking tour of Venice. We started in iconic St. Mark's Square, named for the city's patron saint, and marveled at the Campanile (a watch tower erected in the 17th century) and the Basilica of San Marco – built in the 11th century as the private chapel of the doge (the city's powerful elected leader). The original Doge's Palace, constructed in the 9th century, burned down in the late 10th century. The current palace, built between 1340 and 1501, features the Great Council room (constructed between 1340 and 1365), and the Bridge of Sighs (crossed by convicted Venetians en route to prison). Later, we walked to the La Fenice Theater, an opera house constructed in 1792 by a wealthy Venetian merchant-family.

Piran, Slovenia

Piran is a small Adriatic coastal town of 4,000 residents, sited in the Slovenian portion of the Istrian Peninsula. The beautiful little town today relies on tourism, but it once was an important port. Piran was occupied by Illyrians, Romans, Byzantines, and Franks during the ancient and medieval eras. For five centuries (1283-1797), Piran was a prosperous port in the Republic of Venice, and its Venetian architecture is part of its touristic appeal. Piran next was ruled by the Habsburg Austro-Hungarian Empire and had 12,000 inhabitants in the early 20th century. After World War I, Piran was ceded to Italy, and following World War II, it became part of Yugoslavia and, since 1991, of Slovenia. When the town was annexed to Yugoslavia in 1954, most of its Italian population emigrated, and today Piran is inhabited mostly by Slovenes.

The CEO group had a private visit to the spectacular, 3 million-year-old Postojna Caves outside of Piran. Opened for tourism in 1818, the caves have 15 miles of excavated paths of limestone stalactites, stalagmites, and pillars. It takes a century for the limestone formations to grow 10 millimeters (fingernail size). The Postojna Caves are owned by the Slovenian government and leased to a private concessionaire. Every year, 800,000 visitors pay Euro 28 each to visit, generating annual revenue of $26 million. In the caves, we were entertained by a vocal double quartet of Slovenian males seniors. Later, we took a walking tour of Piran. Piran was the birthplace of violinist and composer Giuseppe Tartini, and its main town square is named after him. The 19th-century town hall has a stone lion, a symbol of the former Republic of Venice.

Sibenik, Croatia

Sibenik is a Dalmatian port and, with 46,000 residents, the tenth largest city in Croatia. Tourists are attracted to its beaches, islands, and historic monuments. Sibenik is an active port and shipyard, and it produces electro-chemicals, ferrous alloys, and aluminum (with hydro-electricity). Sibenik was founded by Croat migrants in the 11th century. Venice and Hungary-Croatia disputed and alternately ruled it for three centuries. Venice gained firm control in 1412 and held Sibenik until Napoleon claimed it for France in 1797. At the Congress of Vienna in 1815, Austria gained hegemony over Sibenik and ruled it for a century. In 1921, Sibenik was incorporated into the Kingdom of Yugoslavia, and Fascist Italy controlled it during World War II. Sibenik became part of Communist Yugoslavia in 1945 and of Croatia in 1991.

We sailed into Sibenik's beautiful natural harbor and enjoyed views of the city's four medieval fortresses. The fortress of St. Michael is the oldest, constructed about 1,000 years ago. Sibenik has the largest medieval settlement on the Dalmatian coast, about twice the size of the one in Dubrovnik, and hopes to emulate Dubrovnik as a tourist destination. We took a stimulating walking tour of the medieval city. The magnificent Catholic Cathedral of St. James was constructed under Venetian rule between 1431 and 1536, using white limestone from Brac. It combines Gothic and Renaissance designs and was designated a UNESCO World Heritage site in 2000. The cathedral has been under restoration for the past four years. We were treated to a moving concert in the cathedral, featuring a soprano accompanied by the church organ.

Dubrovnik, Croatia

Dubrovnik (once called Ragusa) was a republic from 1358 until it was conquered by Napoleonic France in 1806. The Republic of Dubrovnik paid tribute to the Kingdom of Hungary and Croatia (1358-1526) and to the Ottoman Empire (1526-1806). Dubrovnik was run by and for 180 wealthy merchant families. The 45-man senate selected rectors, who ruled for only one month at a time. By the 14th century, Dubrovnik had become an entrepôt, linking the Balkans to Italy. Under Ottoman suzerainty in the 16th century, Dubrovnik reached its peak. An earthquake in 1667 killed 5,000, one-sixth of Dubrovnik's people. Dubrovnik now relies on tourism for its economic base, and in 1979, it was recognized by UNESCO as a World Heritage City. Dubrovnik received 1.44 million tourists in 2019 and housed 28,400 permanent residents.

Many of us had well-narrated walking tours in magnificent Dubrovnik. We walked around the stunning walled-old-city, constructed in the 13th-16th centuries, hiked up and down the walls, and explored some of the town's 47 churches. Dubrovnik's medieval walls (1.2 miles around, 25 meters high, and 6 meters thick) are the best preserved in Europe. We strolled by the Church of St. Blaise (Dubrovnik's patron saint), the Convent of St. Clare, the Rector's Palace, and the statue of Orlando (the city's symbol of independence). Later, we went to the Marin Drzic Theater to attend a performance by the Croatian cellist, Ana Rucner, and to hear an informal talk by the American Ambassador to Croatia, Robert Kohorst (who is a CEO member). We were treated to a sumptuous buffet lunch at the Arsenal Restaurant.

Kotor, Montenegro

Kotor is a medieval fortress-town and a contemporary port and resort center. Sited on the Gulf of Kotor in Montenegro's Adriatic coast, the marvelously-preserved town of 25,000 inhabitants and three miles of medieval walls was designated as a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1979. Kotor's history reaches back over two millennia. It is first mentioned in the Roman era in 168 BCE as Acrvium in the Roman Province of Dalmatia. Kotor later was an autonomous city, ruled by Byzantium (6th-11th centuries) and Serbia (12th-14th centuries). The Republic of Venice incorporated Kotor into its Stato da Mar between 1420 and 1797. After a brief period of French rule (1806-1814), Kotor fell under Austrian domination until 1918. It was part of Yugoslavia from 1919 to 2006 and since then has been a port in independent Montenegro.

Our group enjoyed guided boat rides around Boka Kotorska Bay, an incredibly scenic, 60-meter deep, fjord-like bay. We motored out to an artificial island, constructed in the 15th century near the town of Perast. Devoted Catholics built Our Lady of the Rocks Church on the little island, where sailors visited to give thanks for safe passage. We next motored out into the Adriatic Sea to go down the coast to a fishing village and eat a delicious fish-based meal at a local restaurant. After lunch, we took a walking tour of Venetian-influenced, medieval Kotor. We walked to the Cathedral of Saint Tryphon (the patron saint of Kotor), constructed in the 12th and 13th centuries and an outstanding example of Romanesque and Gothic architecture. There we listened to a nine-member women's A Cappella choir sing haunting, 18th-century Montenegrin songs.

Saranda, Albania

Saranda is a port in southern Albania, located on the Ionian Sea near the Greek island of Corfu. Its 33,000 people are divided between Albanian-speakers (two-thirds) and Greek-speakers (one-third). The port was recently expanded to accommodate cruise ships, and the town relies on tourism. The ancient Greek name of the settlement was Onchesmos. In the 6th century, Byzantines constructed an Orthodox basilica near today's Saranda. The site was unimportant when the Ottoman Empire controlled Albania (1468-1912) and when it became part of the new Albanian state in 1913. Fascist Italy developed the town's port in the 1930s and used it to invade Greece during World War II. Under the People's Republic of Albania (1945-1991), many Albanian-speakers moved into Saranda and many Greek-speakers emigrated to Greece.

The CEO group disembarked in Saranda to drive southward along the Adriatic Coast to Butrint, the archaeological remains of what was, between the 4th century BCE and the 5th century CE, a Hellenistic Greek and later a Roman island-town. After a revival under Venetian rule (14th-17th centuries), Butrint was abandoned and overgrown by laurel trees. Italian archaeologists excavated the site between 1928 and 1943. Butrint features two outstanding ruins. A massive Byzantine basilica was erected in the late 5th and early 6th centuries, shortly before the town went into decline in the late 6th century. Today the basilica is missing only its roof. A well-preserved theater, constructed by the Greeks in the 4th century BCE and expanded later by the Romans, seats 1,500. Historians speculate that Butrint might have had a peak population of 12,000.

Kusadasi (for Ephesus), Turkey

Ephesus is an archaeological site on the Ionian Coast of western Turkey. Ionians Greek migrants settled Ephesus as a port colony between 1000 and 800 BCE. The Romans gained control of Ephesus in 130 BCE and turned it into the Roman capital of Asia and one of the leading cities in the Roman Empire. At its peak in the 2nd century CE, Ephesus had 200,000 permanent residents. The city was a leading Aegean seaport, an administrative and artisanal center, a pilgrimage site for the cult of Artemis, and the heart of a fertile agricultural area. Ephesus declined in the 7th century, after the Cayster River silted its port and Arabs sacked the city, and it was abandoned in the 15th century. Archaeological excavations of Ephesus began in the mid-19th century, and today it is one of the finest extant representations of an ancient Roman city.

From the Turkish port of Kusadasi, we bussed to a small mountain to visit the House of the Virgin Mary, a Catholic shrine created in 1957 to commemorate the site where the Virgin Mary is believed to have lived during the last nine years of her life. We drove on to Ephesus and walked the standard tourist path down the two main roads of the city. Ephesus provides an incredibly rich introduction to Roman urban life in the 2nd century CE, because its ruins include a diverse range of buildings and amenities – a library, a theater (with 25,000 seats), four aqueducts, two Agoras (market places), an Odeon (small theater or meeting house), public baths, a public latrine, numerous temples, paved streets, and water and sewage pipes. The Roman ruins at Ephesus offer a broad understanding of what opulent Roman life must have been like.

Mykonos, Greece

Mykonos is a small Aegean island (33 square miles) in the Eastern Cyclades, sited close to Delos. Most of the 10,000 permanent residents live in the town of Mykonos (also called Chora). The dry and poor-soil island cannot support much agriculture, and tourism has long been its economic base. Mykonos, along with Santorini, are the two most popular Aegean Greek islands. Tourists are attracted by Mykonos's beaches, scenery, and nightlife. Ionians from Athens, who worshipped Dionysus, first settled Mykonos c. 1100 BCE, and the history of the tiny island thereafter paralleled that of mainland Greece. Mykonos was a part of Classical Greece (until 146 BCE), the Roman Empire (146 BCE-330 CE), the Byzantine Empire (330-1390), Venice (1390-1718), the Ottoman Empire (1718-1830), and independent Greece (1830-present).

Many of us took a small boat to Delos, an uninhabited island of only 1.3 square miles. After Leptis Magna in Libya, Delos is the second largest archaeological site in the Mediterranean region. Delos is the legendary birthplace of the Greek gods, Apollo and Artemis. Beginning in the 7th century BCE, the island served as a sanctuary and pilgrimage site. When the Antigonids gained control in the 4th century BCE, they made Delos an Aegean trade center. The Romans took Delos in 188 BCE, built a free port, and expanded its population to 30,000. The island was abandoned in the 7th century CE. A French team has been excavating Delos since 1873. We visited the residential area, the theatre (4,000 seats), the birthplace of Apollo, and the site of the Colossus of the Naxians (a 30-foot statue of Apollo). Delos was breathtaking.
